OTHER PERTINENT INFORMATION:

1. The State Lands Commission initially entered into a lease agreement with San Diego Gas and Electric (SDG&E) in 1954 for the cooling water discharge channel, for a term of 15 years, with two renewal options of ten years each. The second ten-year renewal period of the lease expired July 7, 1989. SDG&E has submitted an application for a new ten-year lease which provides for the continued use and maintenance of the channel into the Pacific Ocean.

The subject property is a cooling water discharge channel for the release of hot water passing through the upland Encino Power Plant. The discharge channel is delineated by rock riprap that juts from the beach into the ocean. The channel has a fence around its perimeter with signs which state that no trespassing is allowed. Along the south fence, there is a permanent opening used by surfers and fisherman. The plant is used in conjunction with the California State
